

Birds-Eye Views of Slavery in Missouri (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Birds-Eye Views of Slavery in Missouri If, at the time when the last Census was taken, in June, 1860, all the inhabitants of each County in Missouri had been gathered together near the centre of the county and collected in regiments of a thousand persons each, and these regiments arranged in regular order, they would have presented to the eye of a person passing over in a balloon, or to the eye of an eagle flying over at the proper height in the air, very much such an appearance as that exhibited in the first of these maps; for each one of the square dots on that map represents a regiment or collection of 1,000 persons. Thus the 22,896 inhabitants of Jackson Co. are represented by 22 squares; the 9,794 inhabitants of Cass Co. by 9 squares, and so in all the counties. Again, it all the slaves in each county had been gathered together and arranged in companies of a hundred persons each, they would have presented to the birds eye an appearance somewhat like that in the second map; for, in this map, each one of the little square dots represents 100 slaves, so that the 3,944 slaves in Jackson Co. are represented by 39 squares, and the 1,010 slaves in Cass Co. by a group of 10 squares, and so on throughout the State. Again, if the slaveholders in each county had been collected in companies of a hundred each, they would have presented an appearance like that in the third map, in which each square dot represents 100 slave-holders, so that the 936 slave-holders at Jackson Co are represented by 9 squares, and the 305 slave-holders of Cass Co. by 3 squares. It will thus be seen that these maps furnish birds-eye views of the people of Missouri; that they enable the reader to make for him .ell a sort of balloon reconnoissance of the State. Substantially the same explanation may be given of the sixth map. It, at the time when the Census was taken, in June, 1850, all the tobacco which had been raised in the county luring the previous year had been collected together, and the hogsheads arranged in square piles, containing each fifty thousand pound, the appearance to the bird eye would have been much like that given in this map. In Howard Co., where 3,188,122 pounds were raised, there would have been seen 03 such squares, represented on the map by 63 square dots; in Osage Co., where 99,535 pounds were raised, there would have been seen but 2 squares, represented on the map by 2 square dots. In counties raising less than 50,000 pounds, no dots are inserted. In the fourth map the square dots are used to denote, not thousands or hundreds, as in the preceding maps, but the same numbers as are expressed by the figures. Thus in Jackson Co., where there are about 17 slaves in every 100 inhabitants, 17 dots are printed, denoting 17 per cent.; and in Lafayette Co where the percentage of slaves is nearly 32, this ratio is expressed by 32 dots. So in the fifth map the dots are used to express the same numbers as the figures. In Jackson Co there are 16 slaves to every 310,000 worth of farm property, and this ratio is expressed by 16 dots; in Cass Co., where the ratio of slaves and farm property is 9 to every $10,000 worth, it is expressed by 9 dots. The preceding explanation will suffice to malts the new notation used in these maps, plaint every reader. Some additional remarks on each map will now be given.
