

Dear Cancer, You Broke My Family

This book is a powerful inspirational story of one family affected by cancer. It tells the story of up-liftment from poverty and broken family to success of a young lady that was left alone in the world. Trina, an extremely smart teen girl developed low self esteem since the death of her mother. She became so distracted with the hurdles she was facing that her grades started to decline. Trina became overweight while grieving for her mother; she was constantly bullied at school. After a few months the adolescent was left to strive for herself in the cold lonely world because her father gave up. She made wrong choices in her love life; she was seeking love and validation in the wrong places. She fell in love with a 60 year old man that had several lovers; Trina knew about life secret life and didnt leave him because of validation. The teen became so desperate that she was ready to give up on life; she hated living. It was hard for her to reach out to people; nobody knew what she was going through. She quit school; she was waiting for death to snatch her! Aubrey, Trinas father applied for leave without pay from his job to provide palliative care for his wife during her months of ailment. He was unable to keep it together. Aubrey became clinically depress after losing his wife to cancer. He lost his job and stopped caring for himself and his daughter. He became a drunkard; his daughter had to care for him. He eventually gave up on life. A teacher from Trinas school came to her rescue as she was at the lowest point in her life. Her teacher Miss Bernard invited Trina to live with her; she mentored her in academics; she showed her love and kindness. Trina had hope in living again; she went back to school and graduated at the top of her class and furthered her education. She later became a counselor to help young teens that were affected by death of a love one.
