Excerpt from Increasing Organic Disease; The New Public Health Problem: Address Delivered Before the American Public Health Association, Rochester, N. Y., September 9, 1915

What we have to say here upon this subject of increasing organic disease will be of service to humanity only to the extent to which it encourage corrective action. With this thought in mind let us take the shortest and simplest road to some of the important facts and fundamental underlying this problem. Let us briefly consider the magnitude and significance of this heavy drain upon national vitality and the means of checking it.

MAGNITUDE OF THE LOSS. Since the great war commenced a year ago, America has spent 50 million dollars to succor Belgium - a glorious charity. During the same year over 400,000 American adults died from the preventable or deferrable diseases of the heart, arteries and kidneys, including apoplexy - an inglorious sacrifice to ignorance and neglect. Virtually all of these annual deaths are premature, as we well know, for they can be deferred by a proper observance of the fundamental laws of individual hygiene, and by adopting the habit of calling occasionally upon medical science for physical inspections for the purpose of detecting trouble in its incipiency, or when it will still respond to corrective measures.

During the past hundred years it is estimated that the average length of life has been increased fifteen years and it is prophesied that another fifteen years will be added during the coming century.
