

LIVIN LARGE AND LOVIN LIFE AS AN ADOPTED CHILD

There are currently between 1.5 and 2 million adopted children in the United States and between 6-10 million adopted adults. In addition, there are currently about a half million children in the foster care system waiting to be adopted. I was one of those children in the foster care system. In 1948 I was shuttled between several foster homes before finally being adopted by two of the more loving parents you could ever hope to find. I am a walking, talking, fully-functioning result of the adoption system and as such I have certain perspectives about adoption that I would like to share with you. Needless to say, I am a huge fan of adoption. As one of the success stories, I am fully aware of the benefits that come from the pairing of a child and loving parents. I have lived a wonderful life, all because my birth mother was willing to give birth and by extension give me a chance at a good life. Yes, there are millions of us out there, each one with our own personal story, each one with our own perspective. For those of you who are considering adoption, and for those of you who are products of adoption, this book is for you. In the following chapters I hope to give you a greater insight about the joys, and pitfalls, that are inherent in the process of adoption. I welcome your comments and I hope that you share your own experiences about adoption. It is my hope that this book will increase awareness about adoption and also validate some of the feelings that many adopted children most likely experience. The book is a series of essays and can be read in any order that you so choose. Sit back, relax and enjoy!
