

Making My Marque: The remarkable life of a straight-talking limey

A great storyteller with a life full of great stories to tell, Paul Linney was born in London in 1922 and served with the British Royal Air Force in India during WWII. In Making My Marque he shares stories from his rich and varied life: deboning sardines in the best restaurant in London, teaching Indian camel drivers how to drive trucks, and selling grain elevators in Nicaragua and charcoal briquette makers in Yugoslavia. But his lifelong passion was driving and restoring MGs and other classic makes. His car stories start as a lad in London and pop up throughout his life and into his senior years in North Carolina.
