

High Percentage Golf: A New Systematic Approach to Course Strategy (Red Golf Blue Golf Book 2)

Jack Nicklaus said Golf comprised two games: Firstly, hitting your shot well. and secondly to observe, evaluate and think your way around the golf course, to play strategically and tactically. This is a new approach to Game planning and Shot management using Launch monitors, Distance Measuring Devices, Google Earth and the information available from the Moneyball analysis of PGA and Amateur players on the most effective strategies to reduce your score. It will make you strategically aware when playing golf and build up your tactical intelligence, so you will reduce your score on the golf course by making better strategic and tactical decisions, and avoid throwing away your score by making bad decisions. Use launch monitors to accurately your shot distances and dispersion patternsHow data from the golf statisticians show you the most effective strategies for winning the match with your gameAlways be thinking of the risk/reward ration of any shot decisionKnow how your own attitude to risk and how this affects your decisionsKnow how to change your game for match play and foursomesYou know how to combat gamesmanshipPrepare a game plan and a shot plan on the course based on your strengths and weaknessesHave an effective pre-round routine
