

A Crisis of Saints: Essays on People and Principles

Fr. George Rutler As we approach the end of the second Christian millennium, Fr. George Rutler takes a penetrating look at the moral and spiritual condition of late twentieth-century society and the Church. He analyzes how moral weakness has been the bane of this era, and he shows that what we most need to counteract this are saints who practice heroic virtue in their daily lives. Rutler illustrates this need with a combination of historical and contemporary examples. Personality struggles from the remote and more recent history of the Church serve as parables for current issues such as the crises in the liturgy, demography, ecclesiology, education, and the media. A unique theme is a more Catholic appreciation of the benefits, and failings, of Church life since Vatican II. While he looks at historical people and events to underscore the need for virtue, Rutler, a popular preacher, also draws upon his personal experiences from the many local churches where he has preached around the world and where he has found peoples frustration with the lack of practical application of the Churchs prophetic teachings. He emphasizes that we must move beyond post-conciliar romanticism about Vatican II to place it in the context of all the councils, and to strive for lives of virtue that respond to Pope John Paul IIs call for effective evangelization in the third millennium. Like his two main men, Newman and Chesterton, Fr. Rutler brings both erudition and great good sense to the high table of Catholic discourse, and like them he is incapable of writing a dull sentence. A splendid addition to the Rutler canon. -George Sim Johnson Fr. George Rutler, a priest of the New York Archdiocese, is a graduate of Dartmouth College and holds a doctorate in theology from the Angelicum in Rome. He is a well-known preacher, television personality, and author of nine books.
