

The Achievements, Standards and Prospects of the Massachusetts General Hospital (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Achievements, Standards and Prospects of the Massachusetts General Hospital Our celebration of Ether Day this year has something the aspect of a reunion. Those of us who love and serve this hospital have not been together before for three years. But your foreign branch, your foreign representatives, whom you sent to do the foreign part of this hospitals work in France and England, did not forget the anniversary day on which the adherents and friends of this hospital are accustomed to gather up the traditions of their past, to take account of stock, and to ask for such visions of the future as may guide it fruitfully. We celebrated Ether Day in 1917 at Bordeaux; in 1918, in London. The tradition has not been broken, at least so far as the loyalty and devotion of our leader, Dr. Washburn, could preserve it. He gathered us together in the chilly October of Southern France, in a bare and draughty building, to commemorate as best we could our home and our roots in this old institution at Boston.
