

The Hygiene of Armies in the Field (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Hygiene of Armies in the Field This subject is so vast, special, and complicated, that I can only promise to touch the fringe of it, and this in a roundabout sort of way. I will not presume to lay down hard and fast rules by which armies in the field may be regulated in sanitary matters in the future, but rather describe, in narrative form, some of my own experience, gained during the time I acted as the Engineer member of the Sanitary Commission sent out to the Army in the Crimea in the spring of 1855; and, that it may be clearly understood under what conditions that Commission was sent out, I insert the Instructions. The Instructions to the Sanitary Commissioners on leaving England for the Crimea: -War Department, 19th February, 1855. Gentlemen, Her Majesty having been pleased to assent to your proceeding on a sanitary mission to Constantinople and the Crimea, you are instructed to obey the directions which follow. The utmost expedition must be used in starting on your journey, in the journey itself, and in the execution of all that is necessary at the place of your destination.
