Arthur, - what did you give the man?
Half a crown, my dear! Now don't make a fuss. I know exactly what you're going to say! Half a crown! said Doris Meadows, in consternation. The fare was one and twopence. Of course he thought you mad. But I'll get it back! And she ran to the open window, crying Hi! to the driver of a taxi-cab, who, having put down his fares, was just on the point of starting from the door of the small semi-detached house in a South Kensington street, which owned Arthur and Doris Meadows for its master and mistress.
