

Ghost Lights: Utah Theatres & Other Entertaining Haunts

Who are the Utah apparitions who haunt these theatres, dance halls, museums, amusement parks and a military post? There is the young man who died in a theatre fire and still warns the people in it. The sunrise meeting on a golf course between a deceased golfer and a little girl who drowned. The woman who appears in a park's old horse stable, but only to visitors wearing purple. The typewriter ghost still writing plays in a gutted theatre. A small town genius who created animated life sized puppets, carousels and a dance hall made of thousands of mirror pieces. An internationally famous doll whose spirit frightened children. A bride mourning her fallen soldier, who haunts a local park. Chinese railroad workers whose suicides keep them trapped in an old hotel. A collector who found secrets of the ancients with a collection so massive that an entire old library powers portals with rocks and crystals. A young actress deserted by her lover and dying of a broken heart, returns to the museum where her theatre dress is on display. An Egyptologist who brought her cursed collections home to Utah. There are apparitions who hang out in familiar places such as libraries, museums and theatres. Men who single-handedly revived and reinvented old theatres who return to check on them. Actors and other theatre spirits who return in costume to where they once performed. Spirits attached to objects and vehicles at a military post. Cemeteries long forgotten, where the remains of souls are still buried beneath our feet or hidden away in the basements of museums. Dance halls, social halls, canyon resorts and amusement parks, where people gathered to celebrate, who have left their energies behind them. And finally, an elephant princess whose poignant and tragic story of her travels all over the country, ended in her inspiring the founding of a zoo. These are the ghosts of history, who tell us their stories and then haunt the places that entertain and intrigue us all!
